Section 2 – Report

Background

New Standards Committee (Further Provisions) (England) Regulations 2009 (SI 2009/1255), in force from 15 June 2009, make provision for Standards for England (the new name for the Standards Board) to suspend the functions of a local Standards Committee where the Committee is failing to perform its functions satisfactorily, and either to discharge the functions itself or to arrange for another authority's Standards Committee to discharge them. The regulations also give authorities a power to establish Joint Standards Committees, and extend the power of Standards Committees to give members dispensations where they would otherwise be prohibited from participating on a matter because of a prejudicial interest.

1 Suspension of Standards Committee Functions

The function of initial assessment of complaints of breach of Code of Conduct by members was transferred from Standards for England to the Standards Committees (or rather the Assessment/Referrals Sub-Committees) of local authorities from 8 May 2008. Most local authorities have taken on this new responsibility and are discharging this function effectively, but the regulations now give a power for Standards for England to intervene in an individual authority if that were necessary.

An intervention can be triggered by Standards for England where:

- 1.1 It is the view that the authority's Standards Committee has failed:
 - to have regard to SfE guidance;
 - to comply with a direction from SfE;
 - to carry out its functions within a reasonable time or in a reasonable manner;
- 1.2 it is of the view that the authority's Monitoring Officer has failed to carry out his/her functions within a reasonable time or in a reasonable manner;
- 1.3 the authority or its Standards Committee has requested Standards for England to intervene.

Where Standards for England considers intervention, it must give the authority notice of its intentions and reasons and give the authority at least 28 days to respond before making a direction. The effect of a direction is to transfer the initial assessment function to either Standards for England itself, or to the Standards Committee of another named authority ("the substitute authority"). In practice, as Standards for England is not sufficiently staffed to resume the initial assessment function, the preferred route is to transfer the function to a substitute authority, but that is likely to be dependent on the two authorities reaching agreement on costs.

During the period of the intervention, Standards for England or the Standards Committee of the other named authority would undertake the initial assessment and review in exactly the same manner as the original authority, and can decide to refer the allegation for a local or Standards for England investigation, alternative action or no action, as appropriate. The intervention is strictly in respect of the initial assessment function, so the regulations give a discretion to Standards for England to use their own investigators and the Adjudication Panel for hearings (or the substitute authority to use its own Monitoring Officer and Hearings Sub-Committee) or to use the Monitoring Officer and/or the Monitoring Officer and/or Hearings Sub-Committee of the original authority if that is appropriate.

An intervention can be terminated by Standards for England at any time.

2 Joint Standards Committees

The regulations give a discretion for two or more local authorities to set up a Joint Standards Committee, and make it clear that such a Joint Standards Committee can be established to discharge all of each participating authority's standards functions, or can be established to discharge just some of the authorities' standards functions, such that each authority retains its own Standards Committee to discharge those standards functions which have not been allocated to the Joint Committee. Accordingly, authorities might agree to establish a Joint Standards Committee which would establish a Referrals and a Review Sub-Committee, but each retain their own Standards Committees to discharge the functions of conducting hearings, providing member training and promoting high standards of conduct. But where all standards functions are allocated to the joint Standards Committee, then participating authorities would no longer maintain their own separate Standards Committees. Where a function is allocated to the Joint Standards Committee, it cannot then be discharged by the Standards Committee of an individual participating authority.

3 Dispensations

The original 2002 Dispensations Regulations provided that a member who had a prejudicial interest in a matter which was coming before the authority could apply to the Standards Committee for a dispensation, and that the Standards Committee could give a dispensation to allow the member to speak and to vote on the matter at meetings. The regulations specified two grounds for dispensation:

- 3.1 the first ground, repeated in the new regulations, was that the business of the authority would be impeded because more than 50% of the members of the decision-making body (Council, Committee, Sub-Committee or Cabinet) would otherwise be prohibited from voting on the matter;
- 3.2 the wording of the second ground was found to be incorrect, by providing that it would apply where, because of the prejudicial interests of members, the business of the authority would be impeded because the authority was unable to comply with the proportionality requirements for Committees or Sub-Committees. In practice, the proportionality rules apply only to the process of appointment of Committees and Sub-Committees, and not to attendance at individual meetings, so this ground was ineffective.

The regulations now re-state the second ground to apply where the business of the authority will be impeded because the absence of members as a consequence of prejudicial interests would upset the political balance of the meeting to such an extent as to prejudice the outcome of voting in that meeting.

Where one or more members have made a written application for a dispensation, setting out why they consider that a dispensation would be desirable, the Standards Committee may only grant a dispensation if it is of the opinion that it is appropriate to grant a dispensation. A dispensation can be granted for a particular meeting or for a period, not exceeding four years. A dispensation cannot be granted for a member who is prohibited from participating at an Overview and Scrutiny Committee by virtue of having been involved in taking the original decision, or for a Cabinet Member for the exercise of delegated powers (on the basis that the appropriate course would be to refer the matter to the Leader or to full Cabinet for decision). All dispensations are then entered in the register of members' interests.

In practice, the grant of dispensations will continue to be problematic because members are rarely aware of the numbers of members who are going to be debarred from the consideration of a particular matter by reason of prejudicial interests until it is too late to call a Standards Committee to consider their requests for dispensation before the meeting takes place. The re-drafted text of the second ground for a dispensation would suggest that a dispensation can now only be granted where the request is supported by clear evidence that voting at the meeting on this item will be conducted on strict party lines, and that the Standards Committee should only grant the minimum number of dispensations necessary to secure that the same result is achieved as would have been achieved had no members had prejudicial interests (i.e. that the majority party, if any, secures a majority of votes, but not that it secures the same degree of majority as it would otherwise have secured).
